

Anaxis Income Advantage is a French law European UCITS-compliant open-ended investment fund (SICAV). The fund is actively managed on a discretionary basis investing primarily in corporate bonds, targeting returns exceeding 3-year German government bond yields by 4%, net of management fees. Although the scope of the investment universe is global, the fund invests mainly in developed markets.

The investment management process draws primarily on the fundamental analysis of bond issues, coupled with diversified allocation construction by selecting securities on a bottom-up basis. The fund managers can invest flexibly, free of constraints based on indices. The portfolio is diversified in regional and sector terms. As a function of their analyses, the fund managers may decide to maintain a proportion of the fund's assets in money-market instruments, short-term fixed-income products or sovereign bonds.

Monthly Comment

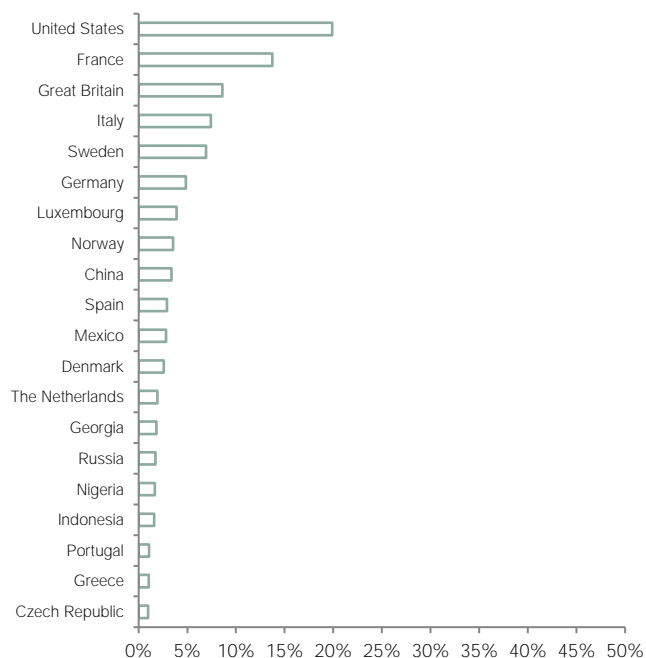

June was another difficult month for the fund, down -0.65% (I1 share) due to widening credit spreads on several portfolio holdings.

During the month of June, our focus was on strengthening the credit quality of the portfolio. Four high yield securities came out of our selection: the Swedish Ovako (steel) and the German JH Holding (corrugated cardboard) called their bonds while the positions in Altice (telecommunications) and Tenet (healthcare) were sold. Five investment grade securities were purchased during the month, in sectors such as real estate, services, beverages and industrial machinery. The largest new position is a floating rate bond in the office property sector issued by Gecina and maturing in 2022.
